

Amy McFarland is an associate Circuit Judge of the Eleventh Judicial Circuit sitting in the Family division where she hears Dissolution and Parentage cases. Prior to her appointment to the bench, she focused her private practice on family law, and served as a Court appointed mediator in parenting allocation cases and child protection cases. She served as a Guardian ad Litem and Parenting Coordinator. In 2015, she coordinated and implemented a 40-hour training program for Court appointed mediators in the Eleventh Circuit. She earned her B.A. from Illinois State University in 1996. She attended the University of Denver, College of Law in Denver, Colorado and earned her J.D. in 2000.